

FABER PITCHER SOX TO SECOND VICTORY

Pierce Cracks in Eighth Inning When Sox Score Five Runs.—Scott
May Work Today.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE]
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9.—The White Sox won the third game of the series for the city championship from their National league rivals, the Cubs, 5 to 1 on Friday. The series now stands 2 to 1 in favor of the American league's favorite.

The game was a struggle between two batters and a pitcher, the two batters being Weaver and Pierce, in which the latter weakened in the eighth inning. Weaver opened the inning with a single to left and Pierce followed with a fly to center. Weaver at third, Jack Collins scored. Weaver at third, Jack Collins doubled and the field took a 3-1 scoring. Weaver and E. Collins. After J. Collins' infield out, Blackburn singled to left, scoring Pierce and Jackson. Blackburn scored a minute later on Schalk's single.

Faber pitched a great game, holding the Nationals to five scattered hits. Four of which were by Zimmerman. He was given good support by the pinches, especially by J. Collins, Welch and Weaver, who made some sensation.

The total paid attendance was 6,603; total receipts, $5,250.25. Each club's share, $783.05; player's pool, $2,349.13; national commission's share, $436.02.

Score:

	R.	H.	E.

Of course Pat Moran and others deserve a share of credit, but then it seems that the A B C of Philly baseball is Alexander, Bancroft and Cravath.

FAMOUS OUTFIELD OF BOSTON RED SOX

Madison, Oct. 9.—Wisconsin varsity open closed practice on Friday with light signal drill in preparation for the Marquette game today. Coach E. J. Hannon and a hard lot with the Catholics from Milwaukee, despite the defeat administered them last year, rumors have leaked out that Mueks will get into action next week and beat the Cardinals game. The Cardinals left Saturday. Coaches believe the oldsmakers will furnish strong opposition to the Badgers, although there is no grave fear expressed as to Wisconsin's chances. The Badgers' lineup as follows this afternoon: 1. e., Lavrum; 1. t., Capt. Beck; 1. g., Hanelt; e., Pottinger; r. g., Gardner; r. George Simpson; r. e., Ray and r. e., Hannon. The Cardinals' lineup: r. h., Smith, and l. b., Kreuz.

Spencer owns the major league record for fielding chances in a single season. Last year he accepted 425 put outs and 30 assists out of a total of 470 chances. The Boston trio has registered more assists to a season than more put outs, for that matter, than any major league trio, since they began chasing flies together six years ago. The average assists for a speaker in the last six campaigns is 12.3, for Hooper the same and for Lewis 24.

Top to Bottom: Lewis, Speaker, Hooper.

One of the features of this season's playing of the Boston Red Sox is the remarkable work of the outfielders, Lewis, Speaker and Hooper. The latter gardeners have been the standouts of the team all year and are still going strong at the end of the season.

Chicago, Oct. 9.—For the eighth time in 10 years, the American League has a season in which the batting average of the American league, according to averages published heretofore, beginning in 1917, the Detroit players, has led the hitters in every league. The season's batting average of .324, which was based on the official scores given Criss of St. Louis the palm, he having batted .431 in 641 games to Cobb's .324 in 150.

That the Chicago Cubs' batting average for the season just ended is .369.

In stolen bases the Georgian has set a new league record at 97 for the season. The old mark for the American league was held by Ed Hamilton of Washington in 1912.

Pitchers who have worked in 25 or more games for the season and finished in the "800" class were: Boston, 15; lost 1; Shore, 20; 2; North, 18 and 7; Foster, Boston, 20 and 3; Boland, Detroit, 18 and 6; Johnson, Washington, 27 and 13; Scott, Chicago, 24 and 12; Leonard, Boston, 14 and 7; Dauss, Detroit, 23 and 12; Faber, Chicago, 24 and 13; Coveleske, Detroit, 23 and 13; Gallia, Washington, 15 and 3; Adams, Washington, 15 and 3; Fisher, New York, 18 and 11; Benz, Chicago, 15 and 10.

Dodger Record 315.

New York, Oct. 9.—Twenty-one of the fastest automobile drivers in the world, today awaited the signal from the starter, Fred Wagner, in the opening of the 350 mile race for the Astor cup and $50,000 in prizes at Sheepshead bay speedway.

And the day was bright, clear and cool and as the two laps of the wooden track had entirely dried up, a smashing record was promised by the speed kings. Thousands of automobile enthusiasts thronged the shore of the bay long before the race, and the time scheduled for the race was 15 minutes.

Among the favorites in the race were, Resta, Mulford, Oldfield, Burman, Cooper, Rickenbacher and De Palma.

An unusual freak baseball play occurred in a recent game between the Athletics and the Cleveland club at Philadelphia. In the second inning, with two out, Lajoie on first and two on, a fly ball was hit to the outfield. Two balls rattled. Pitcher Garrett made a wild hurl, which struck in front of the plate. Healy struck at the flying home run, but hit Catcher O'Neill, who was ready to receive the diamond, while Healy ran for first. Garrett ran in from the box and, picking up the ball, touched out the runner who tried to come from third, retiring the side. The highlight of the play was that Garrett saved his record from a wild pitch and secured a put out. Healy was out, and the side was retired all on one play.

Tyrus Cobb found the Polo grounds a profitable stopping place this season, compiling a batting average of .38 in the eleven contests played in the city. In his last game, getting a hit in only one of the three at bats, Dixie demon collected nineteen hits in forty-one trips to the plate, and escorted ten runs over the platter. Considering the Tigers both in run getting and in hitting, Cobb was a fifth of his team's tallies and the same proportion of his club's swats. Tyrus additionally drew seven passes and was fanned only twice—once by Ray Caldwell and once by Cy Pieh.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

In the market place of an Italian city stood a beautiful statue of a slave girl. The statue represented the slave girl as tidy, a ragged little child, uncombed and dirty, happened to see the statue one day. She stopped and gazed at it. Could this be the likeness of a girl who was a slave girl like herself? The longer she looked the more she admired the statue. She washed her face, combed her hair, and then she came again to look and received an idea. She washed her ragged clothes and mended them. Each time she looked a new idea presented itself until she was a changed girl. You see the statue was a model to her and each time she viewed it a new thought presented itself to her mind, until she was changed to meet the requirements of the slave.

We, too, by our appearance, actions, and beauty of character may be examples to those about us, influencing their lives in the proper direction.

This little paragraph is from an article on character building, written by a pastor to his church paper. It is full of good suggestions, which are worthy of more than passing thought.

The statue in stone, which attracted the child's attention, was an incentive, yet it was cold and unresponsive, yet a work of art which the artist had given a touch of beauty which caused the passer-by to glance with pleasure, and which held the child's attention as a study in contrast to her own forlorn condition.

A beautiful girl in stone, became an inspiration to the child of the street.

Back of art and the artist is the hand-work of the Creator, who provides the model. The slave girl was selected by the sculptor, because she represented a high type of physical strength and beauty, just as the landscape painter selects the mountain or the golden sunset for his canvas on which his brush is to find expression, but the picture and the statue, however perfect, are but copies of the original.

It would require more than the work of a sculptor or a painter to make the most of us handsome enough to attract attention, and yet the same Creator who piled up the mountains, and painted nature's wonderful panorama, endowed the human soul with faculties capable of rare development.

These faculties are not confined to a handsome face, or well developed body, because they are the hidden treasures of the mind and heart. The face may be plain, and the body weak and deformed, but back of the homely face and crooked body is often found a mind that is clean and wholesome, and a heart as pure as the clean white snow.

The thought is often overlooked, but the fact remains, that all of us are models, and whether we will or no, some life is being influenced by the power of our example, and from this influence is just as potent as the model of the slave girl, transferred to stone, which changed the current of a child's life.

Every mother is a model of beauty and perfection to the child in the home. The standard of beauty may not be of the highest type, and the standard of perfection may be open to criticism, but the child is not critical and the mother's smile and gentle caress fills the little heart with joy and gladness and the love bestowed satisfies.

The boy takes his father for a model, and sometimes follows his example to his detriment.

If the father drinks, the boy considers drink a harmless habit, and it is because of this example that many boys in early life imitate his example.

A time ago, the father of three or four boys, said to them: "Boys, I don't want you to smoke before you are of age, and if you will let it alone until you are twenty-one, I will give you each $100." The old man was a smoker, and the boys acquired the habit long before the bonus was due.

Altho it is said about inherited vice and habits, and efforts are made to hold ancestors responsible for the incorrigible boy and wayward girl. There may be cases of this kind, but they are rare. The home and society are responsible for the young feet which go astray, and imperfect models are altogether too common.

The Young Men's Christian Association is just now engaged in a strenuous campaign to aid the home and society in keeping the boy in line through the uncertain years between boyhood and young manhood. It is most commendable work and entitled to every encouragement.

Two years ago one of the church Sunday schools had on its enrollment fifty boys around the age of sixteen, just the age when the church finds it difficult to interest, and largely because the boys taking his father for a model, often fails to find him even an interested spectator.

This church, like many others, had no gymnasium, and there was really little for the boys to do except to be good and look pious, and this in time becomes monotonous, and so the boys commence to drift.

The management became alarmed and is casting about for help thought of the Y. M. C. A., but found that many of the boys could not afford to join, and there seemed no way to provide the money.

The present campaign has developed a happy thought, which may solve the problem. The association has said to the Sunday schools of the city: "Raise $100 and send us twenty boys. This can be easily done, and results will prove so satisfactory that the work can be duplicated without trouble."

This is an age of speculation, and just now the craze is so rampant that Wall street has raised its margins to 40 per cent to check the tide of gambling on industrial stocks, which are soaring on account of war orders.

But there is no speculation about this boy proposition. It is an investment, pure and simple, and the money spent to lead him in straight paths, along the line of least resistance, will help to make the next generation strong and vigorous.

The Y. M. C. A. comes to the aid of the church and the home by offering protection which neither can furnish alone. The boys come in close contact with men whom they can well afford to copy as models, and the atmosphere which environs them is pure and wholesome.

A mistaken notion often prevails concerning society. Many people believe that the "400," found in every community. People of wealth, and possibly of culture and refinement. A wider range of vision may include the church people, and the good, moral people of the town.

But society means vastly more than this. It takes in the saloon area brothel, and all the evil as well as all the good influence. When your boy or girl drifts out of the home and into the street, the chances are that he will drift into the lower strata, unless some one or some organization, extends a helping hand. This is the mission of the Young Men's Christian Association, and it is a high and holy mission.

In the bright light of the future, when the boy is compelled to stand on his own feet and fight his own battles, it will be worth something to us to remember that back in the years we made an investment which has paid many fold in character building.

BUDDHISTS WORKING THROUGHOUT CHINA; HAVE TWO REASONS

Buddhist Leaders Opponents to Christian Missionaries.—Political Policy is Important.
(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Tokio, Oct. 9.—There is increasing evidence that Japanese Buddhists are to undertake propagation of the faith in China with greatly renewed zeal. The movement is one of several demonstrations with which the Japanese people are trying to emphasize their national spirit, in connection with the forthcoming ceremonies of accession of the Emperor Yoshihito, and the movement is singularly noteworthy because it was through China and Korea that Buddhism came to Japan.

The force of Japanese missionaries in China has already been increased, and the campaign for further missionary work is in full swing. The movement is frankly explained as both religious and political. Japan has apparently come to the realization that her missionaries can accomplish great things in spreading the influence of Japan in China and in impressing in a friendly way the position of Japan to increase their prestige there.

The Buddhist leaders, especially the progressives, contend that the propagation of religion in China has been monopolized too much by Christians and centers too much to Japanese. The object of Buddhist propagation in China should be attained, they declare, on the principle of humanity and charity.

The Buddhist views have been set forth in a memorial which has been presented to the government and to every member of the Diet. It points out that the West has been monopolizing the great importance of grasping the mind of the native population for extending their rights and interests in the Far East.

protection to their missionaries. For the extension of her religious propagation the Buddhists emphasize the fact that Japan is in a very convenient position geographically. Nevertheless, neither government nor publicist seems to have attached any importance to the matter. The attention of public-spirited men has been too much concentrated on the material side of Japan's interests; not enough men have turned their attention to the spiritual side of Japan's interest, represented by the extension of religion in China.

The memorial goes on to affirm that the past efforts of the Buddhists have not been appreciated, and have been of little avail. Enormous sums of money had been expended in erecting religious headquarters in China and in sending missionaries to that country. Noble leaders had penetrated into the far interior and not a few had perished there as martyrs to the cause of Buddhism.

In conclusion the manifesto appeals to the government to help the great work of propagation, believing it certain to lay a strong foundation for the establishment of permanent peace in the Far East and the happier relationship between the Japanese and Chinese peoples.

A good deal of interest has also been created by a manifesto issued by the Nichiren sect, the most radical and zealous sect of Buddhism. The tract is couched in unusual terms and bears the heading:—

"Japan will soon be destroyed—Sound the alarm! Sound the alarm!"

The Japan Evangelist which is the organ of the Christian workers here, publishes a translation of the tract with the comment that it sustains the reputation of the Nichiren sect that it possesses "zeal without knowledge." The pamphlet declares: "The people of Japan are proud of their heavenly origin, but, behold, before the God of Christianity, the holy Emperor who is a great god and holy, and the one lord in the universe, is slandered as a 'child of sin,' and is regarded as being without any authority in the sphere of morality."

"It is not true that Christian thought which threatens to destroy and grind into the dust our incomparable" able and supreme Japanese nationality, is now spreading throughout all classes? Truly this is a sign that reveals the spiritual downfall of the Japanese State. If there is in us a drop of loyalty to the Emperor how can we be indifferent to the presumptions of these heretics? The true followers of our national saint, Nichiren, performed his vow in which he said, 'I will be a pillar of Japan. I will be eyes for Japan. I will be the great ship of salvation of Japan.' The tract concludes with a trumpet call to protect the nation by a deeper study and truer practice of Nichiren's doctrines.

able and supreme Japanese nationality, is now spreading throughout all classes? Truly this is a sign that reveals the spiritual downfall of the Japanese State. If there is in us a drop of loyalty to the Emperor how can we be indifferent to the presumptions of these heretics? The true followers of our national saint, Nichiren, performed his vow in which he said, 'I will be a pillar of Japan. I will be eyes for Japan. I will be the great ship of salvation of Japan.' The tract concludes with a trumpet call to protect the nation by a deeper study and truer practice of Nichiren's doctrines.

value as Tiffany is of jewelry merit, will appear at the Apollo on Monday in the picture of Edith Barnard Delano's latest novel, "Rags," a title and a character that fits the star as has no other play in which she has ever been presented, even including her last screen trial, "The Dawn of Tomorrow" and "Little Pal."

This five-part production of the Famous Players Film company, on the Paramount Program is a delightful combination of comedy and drama, both of which elements of the story are thoroughly human. After the perfect acting of Mary Pickford, the story deserves the greatest praise.

"Rags" is the daughter of a drunkard, who abuses and mistreats her, but whom she loves with all the ardor of her strong, young soul. Her mother was loved by a wealthy man, to whom, however, she preferred the worthless man she married, dying after the birth of her daughter. How "Rags," through the invisible influence of destiny, becomes so enmeshed in the web of fate that she meets the nephew of the man whom her mother rejected, and falls in love with him, though realizing that his social position is too far above hers to ever permit a marriage between them, and how eventually her mother's lover learns of her unhappiness and takes her to his palatial home to live with him, where his nephew again meets her, and in the new surroundings renews his love, are convincingly and sympathetically related in the photoplay. A special school matinee will be given at 4:15 o'clock.

ly overwhelming in the intensity and strength of her portrayal.

This stirring five-part photoplay will make an indelible impression on the minds of all who witness it. It will be shown at the Apollo on Wednesday.

PAULINE FREDERICK WHO HAS DESERTED THE STAGE FOR THE SCREEN

AT THE APOLLO.

Pauline Frederick in "Sold," one of the foremost emotional artists of the American stage, who achieved a great personal triumph in her initial motion picture characterization, in the famous Players Film company's superb photo-spectacle, "The Eternal City," returns to the screen in an overpoweringly dramatic photo-production of "Sold," the great drama of woman's devotion, adapted from the Russian of George Erastov. As the wife of the poor artist, who poses for his successful rival in order to obtain funds for her husband, who detects and misjudges her Miss Frederick is complete-

"The Typhoon" on Tuesday.

"The Typhoon," one of the most remarkable and powerful dramas of love and loyalty will again be seen here. It is being brought back to the Apollo on Tuesday for the second time at the request of many. It tells the story of a young man and woman, the loyalty and devotion of the Japanese to old Japan, and contains a strong love story.

Sessue Hayakawa, the wonderful Japanese star is featured in the leading role and Gladys Brookwell is seen in the role of the Parisian actress in love with him.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

Knight of the Fiery Cross Exposed in Griffith's Spectacle.

Ghostly white, but more sure-footed than death itself—leash and blood-ghosts of the moonlight right in a war-torn southern—this awful, avenging K. K. K. swoops down upon the ravishing negro and grabs him up as a fishhook its prey, whirling him away God knows where to a fate from which there is no escaping—this is one of the actual sights shown in Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," and one of all others, perhaps, that has caused most of the violent outbursts of criticism of the work and which is the basis of the ugly arguments the negro makes against it in all the cities, several times almost stopping its presentation.

In these scenes Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" is revived with telling reality; practically all the remainder of the incredible living panorama (always, of course, giving due credit to the military experts who laid out and planned the battles) was consulted as to the various scenes and episodes throughout. It is D. W. Griffith's own original creation.

Those readers of "The Clansman" will easily note Griffith's wonderful improvement over the original when "The Birth of a Nation" appears here at the Myers for the week of Oct. 31. And they will also see brought to life before them all that lead up to such a state of affairs, from the introduction of slavery in this country to the first shot on Sumter.

History has its skeletons in the closet the same as individuals and they are no worse off for being brought to light and shown up to the people. There are certainly a number of them shown up to the white light of day in this work.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

Persons of artistic and literary taste will await with keen interest the coming of the Edison masterpiece, "Vanity Fair," in which Mrs. Fiske is starred. This production is booked for screening at the Myers theatre next Wednesday, Oct. 13, matinee and evening.

Never before has the Edison Co. attempted anything so elaborate or lengthy. The interiors, exteriors, great casts of people and the engagement of Mrs. Fiske herself is ample evidence of the painstaking care and heavy cost represented by this remarkable attraction. Several trips to Boston were made to obtain a replica in the fashion of its buildings, or Russell Square, London. Antique shops of both New York and Boston were ransacked for hangings and furniture of the period. No expense was spared in matters of casts and "sets," some four hundred odd persons having been employed in the various scenes.

Picture her deep interest in motion pictures and her agreeable adventures in acting before the camera, Mrs. Fiske has no intention of continuing in her work. Her desire to perpetuate her characterization of Becky Sharp was her chief reason for accepting the proposal of the Edison Co. and it is improbable that she will ever again be seen in motion pictures.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

George M. Cohan's "Seven Keys to Baldpate" will be acted at Myers' theatre, Saturday, Oct. 10, matinee and night. The play which varies ed run of ten months. Mr. Cohan calls his unique work a mystery farce, the adjective applying to a succession of, strange and highly mysterious events that transpire in an old inn on top of a mountain during a terrible winter's storm. When you are told that Baldpate is the name of the mountain inn and that the old caretaker of the place hands the hero, "the only key to Baldpate," you may get a remote notion that the other six keys are going to turn up in quite a mysterious way.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

Valli Valli in "The High Road," which comes to Myers Theatre tonight, is the latest production from the studio of E. A. Rolfe, and will afford the patrons of their first opportunity of seeing the exquisite stage star in her first motion picture effort.

We announce with pleasure a return showing of "The Reward" on next Tuesday. Miss Bessie Barriscale plays the part of the chorus girl who finds it a lonesome work to be good, and after her great success in "The Making" and "The Cup of Life" we are sure you will be pleased to see her in this excellent picture.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

The Greater Vaudeville Performance at the Myers next Monday and Tuesday, offering a few variety acts of exceptional local talent, with the rest secured outside, at a considerable expense, assisted by the Myers 5-piece orchestra, is going to be a highly popular attraction. Speaking with the local people who have charge of the entertainment, they said: "The acts are arranged in a happy order and are run off in a snappy fashion that makes for attraction. Speaking with the friends of the vaudeville patrons."

The famous Booster Quartet, who are making their farewell appearance before joining Lew Dockstader's Minstrels, made a decided hit on the Janesville public when they sang on previous Booster runs here.

Preston and Jobe, offering something new in vaudeville have conquered their audience with their running fire of witty sayings and have kept the house rocking in their seats wherever they have played.

Joe Ryan, one of Janesville's leading performers, will offer to the theatregoers something clever in the line of buck and wing jiggling.

Jock Lauder, Harry's Oldest Son, appearing in an original brilliant line of jokes and songs, having scored a success in the numerous places he has shown.

Miss Helen Franklin, who was featured in the moving pictures, "A Summer's Day in Janesville," will appear in a unique line of aesthetic dancing. Miss Manila Powers, who is well known as a classical singer of unusual ability, will render several solos, assisted by a special accompanist.

"Bill" McDonald and Sterling Campbell, in their comedy acrobatic tumbling, bubbling over with ludicrous situations in their new version of their popular dances, will show a dazzling variety of the latest steps.

F. W. Murphy, unequalled whistling soloist, whistling both classical and popular ragtime songs, has swept the theatre wherever he has appeared. Seats are now selling at Koebelin's jewelry store.

"SCANDAL" A STORY WITH EFFECTIVE MORAL

A Powerful Sermon Against Scandal-mongers Seen In Picture.

"Scandal"—how brilliant and effective on the minds of Princess Theatre patrons last evening was this story of all ages impressed. The photoplay's title was "Scandal," and through five reels of film, the vivid evils of the mongrels who peddle about to the detriment of their neighbor was pictured. Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley were at their best in this drama of modern times and captivated their audiences both in anger and in pathos. Pathos filled every scene for the girl who fell the victim to the lashing tongues of the home-breakers and ruiners of lives.

It was an excellent film, a special feature, and the Princess management is to be congratulated. More such dramas are needed to vividly portray and turn the American people

ROBERT EDESON AT MAJESTIC THEATER

Well Known Star Seen Last Night in Problem Play.

The distinguished stage star Robert Edeson gave a most finished performance of the difficult leading role in "Man's Prerogative" at the Majestic last night. The fact that it was a problem play dealing with the double standard of morality for the sexes made the part difficult, but it was handled in such a way that the point was made and the lesson brought home without giving the least offense. The rest of the cast, including Mary Alden as the wife, were thoroughly competent, and the production held close attention throughout.

RAILROAD COMMISSION'S WORK IN PAST TEN YEARS IS PUBLISHED IN VOLUME

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., Oct. 9.—The accomplishments of the Wisconsin railroad commission for the past ten years are summarized in book form in a volume just off the press of D. Appleton & Co. The book is written by Prof. J. Holmes of this city, who was chairman of the public utility committee of the 1913 legislature. In his opening statement Mr. Holmes says that Wisconsin is one of the pioneers in the regulation field and that the results have, on the whole, been satisfactory. The book is edited by Prof. Emory R. Johnson of the University of Pennsylvania, who is a recognized authority and the editor of an entire engineering and railroad series. Prof. Johnson has also been a railroad commissioner in Pennsylvania.

Years ago an expedition went up the Missouri river to the place where in 1856 a cargo of 500 barrels of whiskey had been lost. The value of the fifty-year-old whiskey was the incentive rather than thirst. The wrecking party spent $2,500 and rescued a pair of shoes.

An Open Letter To Those of the Public Who Appreciate High Class Motion Picture Productions

It has been some weeks since this theatre started to play motion picture features in five, six and seven reel plays released on THE METRO PROGRAMS.

Nothing but the highest commendation has been heard regarding these METRO PICTURES—those who have seen them are most enthusiastic about the players, the artistic settings employed and the general excellence of the programs.

Since their inception into the motion picture field seven months ago THE METRO PICTURES have outstripped every other company in putting out high class pictures.

THE METRO COMPANY has succeeded in securing the services of many of the better known stage stars among them William Faversham, Ethel Barrymore, Olive Wyndham, Mme. Olga Petrova, Valli Valli, Marguerite Snow, Emmett Corrigan, Mary Miles Winter, Orrin Johnson, Francis X. Bushman, Arthur Chevalier, Max Figman, Louis Meredith, Edmund Breece, Thos. Jefferson, D. Miller Kent, Adelaide Thurston and have produced characters that these actors are admirably fitted to portray.

Some of the early showings of METRO PICTURES at The Myers will be— "The Right of Way," "The Shadow," "Marse Covington," "The Second in Command," "The Vampire," "A Royal Family," "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," "The Middleman."

METRO PICTURES will be shown at this theatre on THURSDAYS, FRIDAYS AND SATURDAYS with matinees daily at 2:30 and two performances each evening at 7:15 and 9:00.

Whenever you see the sign METRO PICTURES in an advertisement you will know it stands for a high class motion picture.

NEED OF PATRIOTIC NEUTRALITY URGED

USHER PRAISES GOV. PHILIPP FOR HIS BROADMINDED CITIZENSHIP.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK

Work of Chief Janssen for Better Saloon Regulation in Milwaukee Discussed—Other Matters. (By Ellis B. Usher.)

Milwaukee, Oct. 8.—Governor Philipp has been saying some good things and saying them well, regarding American citizenship, and he has risen to real statesmanship when he told his hearers to stand by President Wilson and his own government. "That's the stuff," that is where every American citizen will stand so long as there is menace of war from any quarter. Mr. Philipp's father was born in Switzerland and he came to this country to better himself and his children. When the civil war broke out he enlisted early. He fought through and made a record as a free American who prized his opportunities, that is a rich heritage for his children and his children's children. He didn't part his Americanism in the middle and have the "American" come last. But nobody will stop to inquire where the man comes from who talks as Governor Philipp is talking now. He is an example that may be studied with great profit by some of our other citizens who are either themselves exhibiting doubtful loyalty and incomprehensible misunderstanding of American institutions and American neutrality, or allowing noisy pro-German propagandists to represent them.

Scores Race Prejudice. Among Germans of foreign birth and their children, many of whom have been lifelong and cherished friends, I ought to be free from every suspicion of race prejudice. I despise it as I do religious creeds in politics. Both breed bad blood and accomplish no good purpose. I am, as I am an American, opposed to questioning any loyal citizen as to the place of his birth or his right to a free conscience when he approaches his God, but the man with a divided allegiance, a doubtful one, is not a good American. A great many people here in Wisconsin are misled by what has come from the outlet of the war in Europe, been an offensive and noisy German propaganda, and because they have been considerate, too considerate, of their neighbors, associates and friends of German birth and extraction, they have said nothing, except among themselves. And as to what they will say and do among themselves, where civility and polite consideration have been eliminated, there was an excellent illustration of the National Farmers' Congress held in Omaha last week, where there were delegates from many states. Among the resolutions was one endorsing President Wilson, which closed by saying: "We offer him our loyal support in his efforts to protect the rights of American citizens and to maintain impartial neutrality of this nation." A delegate named Wooster attacked this last resolution and wanted it stricken out. He also attacked the president. Wooster was a soldier of the Union in the civil war. Then the other farmer, Senator Brown of Iowa, rose and pointing to the Grand Army button in the lapel of his coat said:

"I fought four years in the civil war. I was not for Wilson at the election and did not vote for him. I am proud that I did not. But, gentlemen, he is our president and it is the duty of every citizen to stick by him now. These are treasonable utterances that have been heard here. If this man don't like this country let him get out of it and go where it suits him better. I am backing President Wilson."

That's the way one American talks to another on the subject, and it was that way that convention talked for it passed the resolution so enthusiastically that not even the man who caused the controversy dared vote against them. The people are much more stirred and earnest on this subject than their public men, or most of the newspapers. As usual, the who assume to be leaders of those who are far in advance of them.

Figures on Sunday Meetings. In the figures given last week's letter on the "Billy" Sunday meetings in Omaha there were defects that should be corrected. I misapprehended the purpose of some published figures and thought they covered more than they did. But the figures show that at the close of the twenty-fifth day, which was last Sunday, the entire attendance from the beginning had been 333,400. The total collection in money had been $21,676.43. Uncollected pledges about $2,500. The "trail blazers" numbered 2,726, including a large number who had previously been church members but had drifted into inactivity. The boy and girl "trail blazers" numbered 2,385. So the grand total was 5,211. All told this makes conversions number one on a half per cent of the total attendance. Putting all into that class, and the cost per head, based on the voluntary contributions is, it pledges are added, $4.89. I do not know what the majority is but the expense will not be covered by the voluntary contributions. It is merely interesting to compute these figures for concrete results. In Omaha there is a population of 130,000. The total collection was claimed to be 200,000. It is probably 20,000 less. So unless the church membership is large, it will take some hard work for "Billy" to leave a result of the whole lump at this rate. Even if one believes in him and his methods it must look rather discouraging to the man who balances the books.

Closes Undesirable Saloons. The law passed at the last session of the legislature, which puts the control of saloon licenses into the hands of the people, has been a success. It has come to a demonstration here in Milwaukee. Chief Janssen has not only put his disapproval upon more saloons but the whole community council has backed him up in it and gone farther. The chief showed, which is of a great deal of importance to everyone interested in public morals, that a result of closing the saloons was that a great many of the saloon-keepers had become places of more or less open prostitution. The saloons had been a place of vice and of such women. He advocated an ordinance closing all cabarets and forbidding the "family entrance" and all private dining rooms, and practically everything that would make it possible for improper purposes, and making their presence in any place where liquor is sold, even with meals, subject to strict rules. The mayor vetoed this ordinance and it was passed over his veto. It will be of interest to the people of other cities and the state to know that the chief and the council have been backed up in this policy by the ministers, church people and moral reformers, and possibly most potent of all, he has had the brewers and the saloon-keepers' association. The principal objectors have been the large hotels where the very highest class of cabaret performances have always drawn fashionable audiences. There is fear that the ordinance may be modified as to permit performances in such places, under strict regulation. As it is, Mr. Janssen and Mr. Vernon Castle could not dance in a hotel in this city, where people are dining and wine is served.

Meeting New Conditions. It will be realized that this looks like a new policy for Milwaukee, but it should be understood that the change began several years back when gambling houses were forbidden to run and the segregation of commercial vice was abandoned. It does not, I am convinced, mean that Chief Janssen is any more of a "reformer" than he has always been. It means merely that he is honestly trying to meet the new conditions with new methods. He is not only a good chief of police but he is a student of the problems with which he is dealing, as well as a man who has as much practical experience as any police chief in the country. The Milwaukee situation will furnish a field for study to all who are interested in the new ideas of dealing with these matters. However much they may be ignored or theorized about, practical and capable officers of the law know their serious import and are large enough of mind to see that the saloon-keepers' association, that scatters vice everywhere throughout a community and makes proper police surveillance a physical impossibility, without having an officer on every block in every city, and one who is both capable and incorruptible. This general law applies to all cities in the state as other cities may have to face the cabaret question at an early day.

Sport Notes. Yale defeated at football. New York and Chicago both out of the playoffs in the big leagues. Travers, Quimet and Evans beaten in golf at the Amateur championship. Surely Grantland Rice, in the October American, has propounded a correct theory. Mr. Rice says of golf—and includes other sports—that the day when one or two men could be called supreme has passed. Now, however, the young men have made up their minds to play one game or another, they make up their minds to play it for all there is in it. More and more young men are taking to various sports. More and more has the struggle-hold that a few have had on the supremacy in each sport been dissipated. Still true, Mr. Rice! Federal leagues, public golf courses, new rules in football have all had their effect. Each year now it looks as if the various sports fans would cry "The King is dead! Long live the King!"

Erle at the Bat. (Advertisement.) The versatility of the president of the Erie railroad sticks out in a great many ways, in the social as well as in the business and operating methods of that great system. Anybody who has heard him speak has seen him holding his head up "out" at the ball ground that he has fixed up for the school boys at Wauwatosa. Knows that the boy side of him is still fresh and vigorous. To those who understand this side of the Erie, it is clear it would not be a surprise to hear that the Gotham-Erie all-star baseball team came out to Chicago last Sunday and beat the Chicago Cubs 9 to 7. Among the crowd of rosters and fans that accompanied the New York ball team were a number of Erie officials and the president of the Erie, Mr. Erle. Presiding F. D. Underwood, president of the Chicago will get busy next season to bring that cup west. It is said that the crowd of 2,500 fans that witnessed the game was the same big western railroad men in it.

Temperance Talks

(By Temperance Educational League.) No. 14. Public Opinion and the Liquor Traffic.

It is interesting to note the change in public thought in recent times upon the subject of alcohol and intemperance. A few years ago it was regarded primarily as a question of private and public morals and while it was considered important by many as an individual matter there was more or less indifference upon the subject as a question of public morals.

Scientists now tell us that alcohol is a poison, that it paralyzes the functions of the body, that it is a life destroyer and is injurious and detrimental to those who use it. Statistics have shown that alcohol shortens life and causes the death of 25 per cent of the population, 45 per cent of the children, 31 per cent of the insane, 31 per cent of the criminals, and 23 per cent of the suicides in the United States.

In the daily press, in magazine articles and in clubs and societies, a knowledge of the subject is being disseminated among the people generally. Like cholera, small pox and the white plague, alcoholism is coming to be regarded as one of the great scourges of the human race. The Temperance Educational League believes that the time is not far distant when there will be a well formed, intelligent public opinion upon the subject and that it will be a sane and rational opinion based upon statistics and scientific investigation and research.

We have before us a resolution adopted at the National Convention of Allentists and Neurologists, held in Chicago in July, 1914. It contains much of great value and as it comes from such high authority we quote from it:

"Whereas in the opinion of the meeting of the allentists and neurologists of the United States in convention assembled, it has been definitely established that alcohol, when taken into the system, acts as a definite poison and that the effects of this poison are directly or indirectly responsible for a large proportion of the insane, epileptic, feeble-minded and other forms of mental, moral and physical degeneracy; and

"Whereas, the laws of many states make alcohol freely available for drinking purposes, and, therefore, encourage the physical, mental and moral degradation of the people, and many hospitals for the insane and other public institutions are now compelled to admit and care for a multitude of inebriated persons, and many states have already established re-education camps for the treatment and re-education of such individuals with great benefit to the individuals and to the community; therefore, be it

"Resolved, that we unqualifiedly condemn the use of alcohol beverages and recommend that the various state legislatures take steps to eliminate such use, and that we recommend the general establishment by all states and territories of special colonies or hospitals for the care of inebriates, and be it

"Resolved, that organized science should initiate and carry on a systematic, persistent propaganda for the education of the public regarding the deleterious effects of alcohol."

Orfordville News

Orfordville, Oct. 8.—Miss Jane B. Day of Broadhead transacted business in the village on Wednesday. Dr. S. W. Forbush attended the state medical meeting in Milwaukee on Thursday and Friday. He reports a most interesting and instructive time.

Mrs. Zell Gansell-Ingersoll of Peoria, Ill., is spending some time in Orfordville, the guest of her mother and other relatives. The first floor of the Odd Fellows' building is laid and it is expected that the brick work will commence in a few days. The building is 25x30 feet, and is to be built of solid brick. Messrs. Anderson, Wells and Cole spent the day Thursday in Janesville where they attended a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Williston. Several from Orfordville went to Beloit and witnessed the moving picture show, "The Birth of a Nation." They report it as most entertaining and instructive.

Mrs. Andrew Lee entertained the Missionary society of the Luther Valley church on Thursday afternoon.

The Light and Power company has completed pouring the concrete for the base of their engine. It will be 10x7 feet and about seven feet deep. The snow flurry on Friday morning certainly reminded one of the approach of winter. The weather prophet in this vicinity has absconded, owing to his utter failure to predict with any accuracy what the weather is to be one day from another. Joseph Grenawalt, who has been in poor health for the past few weeks, would not improve as fast as his friends would wish. At present he is confined to his bed.

LINE TO JANESVILLE FROM CAPITAL CITY IS AGAIN PROMISED

Will be First of Four Interurban Railroads Which Will be Built Out of Madison.

Again comes the promise of an interurban railroad from Janesville to Madison. According to the announcement made at Madison on Thursday, the Wisconsin Construction Co., a project of a network of four roads, which will center in Madison, and all will be sponsored by the Wisconsin Interurban company, a corporation recently organized, being the successor to the Chicago & Wisconsin Valley Street Railway Co., and Central Wisconsin Construction Co.

With the reorganization of the companies into the Wisconsin Interurban system also comes the announcement that the line to Janesville in this city is to be started at once and that the project has been financed by Herbert Green & Co., Chicago bankers and railroad builders.

It is proposed to build the line from Madison to Janesville a distance of 38 1/2 miles, first. The next line to be built is that between Madison and Portage, a distance of 38 1/2 miles. Then will be constructed a road from Madison to Middleton, and a fourth line with the Madison-Portage line, in a northeasterly direction, to Prairie du Sac, a distance of 38 1/2 miles. The last road to be built by the new company is from Madison to Fond du Lac by way of Sun Prairie, Columbus, Deer Dam and Waupun.

The Wisconsin Interurban system has acquired all title and interest to the property of the former companies and has applied to the secretary of state for an amendment to the charter changing the name.

Herbert Green & Company make a business of financing and underwriting the bonds of railroad companies and are interested in a number of big propositions. The company has certificates of convenience and necessity to build lines to Janesville, Prairie du Sac and Portage. As soon as the work of surveying the proposed route between Madison and Fond du Lac is finished applications will be made to the railroad commission for a certificate of convenience and necessity to build the line.

Herbert Green & Company agreed to finance the project after their representatives had been looking over the grounds for two months and realized the possibility of the remarkable development of interurbans radiating from Madison. Madison is considered as a good railroad center and with electric lines running in various directions, connection will be made with the Fox River valley and with roads which run into Illinois.

The agreement between the new company and Herbert Green & Company is for the building of a standard gauged high speed passenger, freight and electric roads. E. Jones of Portage, who has been the leading spirit in the movement for the building of electric roads out of Madison, retains his active interest in the new organization.

CLINTON

While playing ball at school Wilson Doubleday had the misfortune to have his nose broken by running into one of his teammates.

Dr. H. H. Ransom was the guest of relatives this week. He leaves next week for Iowa, where he will take up a practice of medicine. Harry's many friends wish him all kinds of success in his chosen profession.

A short program will be given and refreshments served at a cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Rokenbrodt were guests of their son, A. M. Rokenbrodt, Sunday.

Mrs. William Dean, Mrs. Charles Hackwell and Mrs. A. Dodge and the ladies' meeting at Mrs. Chowers', at Fairfield, Thursday.

FITCHETT'S DAHLIAS CARRY OFF HONORS AT NINE BIG FAIRS

Janesville Man's Gardens Have Been Visited by Hundreds During Summer and Fall.

Heavy frosts this week ended the blooming time of the dahlias in the J. P. Fitchett gardens on Milton avenue and thousands of gorgeous flowers have been destroyed. Only a few, comparatively, could be picked and saved for a short time in storage, and the last of these will be gone by Sunday.

Never have the Fitchett dahlia gardens, now famed the country over, been more beautiful than they have this summer and fall, and never have they attracted so many visitors from all parts of Wisconsin and Illinois. Scores of people every day, hundreds, perhaps thousands, during the season, came to inspect the flowers and wonder at their rare and extensive beauty.

—extensive because the garden comprises fully three acres of land, with every available inch of ground producing its share of attractive blooms. On Sundays, especially, the garden came from far and near, and innumerable auto parties from the Wisconsin lakes and resorts, as well as nearby cities and towns came to admire and inspect the great display. Janesville residents, too, have entertained frequent callers and have entertained their guests from away by a trip to the gardens, easily one of the finest show places of the city. One prominent woman from the southern part of this county declared on a recent visit to the dahlia fields, "These dahlias mean as much to any town as flowers in and in fact are worth more, because they not only advertise the city far and wide but they bring here throngs of people who would not come otherwise."

Mr. Fitchett has displayed his flowers at nine fairs and has given two private displays during the fall. At all of the fairs which were those at Janesville, Evansville, Beloit, Madison, Watertown, the state fair at Milwaukee, Baraboo, Beaver Dam and Elkhorn, the Janesville dahlias were awarded first honors in the professional class. Not only was this the case this year, but Fitchett's displays have taken the blue ribbon at all fairs at which they have been shown for the past four years. In a five state competition a few years ago he won the honors which were sought by prominent florists and dahlia growers. There was no such exhibition made this year.

Asked how many varieties of dahlias he has, Mr. Fitchett only shakes his head and answers honestly, "I don't know; their name is legion." His stock is most complete, including a great number of rare imported varieties, many of which he has the exclusive sale in America. In addition to all the finest flowers which are grown in either Europe or America he is also developing a large number of varieties himself, and within a few years expects to have on the market several exceptionally beautiful flowers. For the present none of these new varieties are for sale and will not be until they are recognized by the national association which will give the bulbs a recognized standing with dahlia growers in Europe and America.

Needless to say, Mr. Fitchett's dahlia business is rapidly growing. Only a few years ago he raised a few flowers in his garden as a hobby. Now it is a flourishing business requiring the attention of three or four men for practically the entire year. He received orders from all over the United States, his trade being confined by no means to Wisconsin and Illinois.

"How would a boy grow up if he never had mud between his toes and a torn hat?" Mrs. Homer Hoch demands to know. Many boys have mud not only all the way between their toes and a torn hat, but also on top of the torn hat, and still they seem never to grow up.—Kansas City Star

TWO CHILDREN HAD CROUP. The two children of J. W. Nix, mechanic, Cleveland, Ga., had croup last winter. One was a boy of 8, the other a girl of 8 years. Mr. Nix writes: "Both got so choked up they could hardly breathe and couldn't talk. I gave them Foley's Honey and Tar and nothing else and it entirely cured them." This reliable medicine will be in every home for it gives instant relief from colds, coughs and croup, heals raw inflamed throats and loosens phlegm. W. T. Steyer.

Once, when Milt McBrier rode up to the sawmill, he found the girl sitting there, her hands clasped on her knees, gazing dreamily across the sawdust and confusion of the place.

"You're right smart interested in that thar woodpile, ain't ye, ma'am?" he inquired with a slow, benevolent smile. His kindness of guise invited confidence, and there was no one else within earshot, so the girl looked up, her eyes a little misty and her voice impulsive.

"Mr. McBrier," she said, "every one of those timbers means part of a dream to me, and with every one of them that is set in place will go a bone and a prayer."

He nodded sympathetically. "I reckon," he said, "ye kin do right smart good, too."

"Mr. McBrier," she flashed at him in point-blank questioning, "since I came here I have tried to be of use in a very simple and ineffective fashion. I have done what little I could for the sick and distressed, yet I am constantly being warned that I'm not allowed to carry on my work. Do you know of any reason why I shouldn't go ahead?"

He gazed at her for a moment, quizzically, then shook his head.

"Oh, pshaw!" he exclaimed, "I wouldn't let no such talk as that fret me none. Folks round hyar ain't got much ter do except ter gossip 'round. Nobody ain't a-goin' ter hinder ye."

The Rifle Came Slowly Up.

We hadn't such bad people, after all." After that she felt that from the McBriers she had gained official sanction, and her resentment against Anse Haver grew because of his scornful ungraciousness.

The last weeks of the summer were weeks of drought and plague. Ordinarily, in the hills storms brew swiftly and frequently and spend themselves in violent outpourings and cannonading of thunder, but that year the clouds seemed to have dried up, and down in the tablelands of the Blue Grass the crops were burned to worthless stalk and shrunken ear. Even up here, in the birthplace of waters, the corn was brown and sapless, so that when a breeze strayed over the hillside fields they sent up a thirsty, dying rasp of rattling whispers.

It was not only in the famished forests and seared fields that the hot breath of the plague breathed, carrying death in its fetid nostrils. Back in the cabins of the "branch-water folks," where little springs diminished and became polluted, all those who were not strong enough to throw off the touch of the specter's fangs sickened and died, and typhoid went in and out of Haver shack and McBrier cabin while perishing, a pest on both your houses." The widow McNash had not been herself since the death of Fletch. She who had once been so strong over her drudgery, sat day long on the doorstep of her brother's novel and, in the language of her people, "jest sickened" and "pled away."

So, as Juanita Holland and Good Anse Talbott rode sweating mules about the hills, receiving calls for help faster than they could answer them, they were not astonished to hear that the widow was among the stricken. Though they fought for her life, she refused to fight herself, and once again the Eastern girl stood with Dawn in the brier-choked "buryn"-ground, and once more across an open grave she met the eyes of the man who stood for the old order.

But now she had learned to set a lock on her lips and hold her counsel. So, when she met Anse and Job afterward, she asked without rancor: "May I take little Jesse back with me, too? He's too young," she added, with just a heartless trace of her old defiance, "to be useful to you, Mr. Haver, and I'd like to teach him what I can."

Anse and Job conferred, and the elder man came back and nodded his head.

"Jesse can go back with ye," he said, "I'm still a-aimin' to give ye all the rope ye wants. When ye've had enough an' let me know, an' I'll take care of Fletch's children."

And on her farm, as folks called Juanita's place, that September saw many changes. Near the original cabin was springing up a new structure, larger than any other house in that neighborhood, except, possibly, the strongholds of the chiefs, and as it grew and began to take form it imparted an air of ordered trimness to the countryside about it. It was fashioned in such style as should be in keeping with its surroundings and not give too emphatic a note of alien strangeness.

Juanita wished that her cabin could house more occupants, for the plague had left many motherless families, and many children might have come into her fold. As it was, she had several besides the McNashes as her nucleus, and while the weather held good she was rushing her work of timber-felling and building which the winter would halt.

CHAPTER XII.

One day in early October young Milt McBrier happened upon Dawn and Juanita walking in the woods.

The gallant colors and the smoky mists of autumn wrapped the forests and brooded in the sky. An elixir went into the blood with each deep-drawn breath and set to stirring forgotten or hitherto unawakened emotions. And in this heady atmosphere of quickened pulses the McBrier girl halted and gazed at the Haver girl.

Juanita saw Young Milt's eyes flash with an awakened spirit. She saw a look in his face which she was woman enough to interpret even before he himself dreamed what its meaning might be.

Dawn was standing with her head up and her lids half closed looking across the valley to the Indian summer haze that slept in smoky purple on the ridges. She wore a dress of red calico, and she had thrust in her belt a few crimson leaves from a gum tree and a few yellow ones from a poplar.

Juanita Holland did not marvel at the fascinated, almost rapt look that came into Young Milt's eyes, and Young Milt, too, as he stood there in the autumn woods, was himself no mean figure. His lean body was quick of movement and strong, and his bronzed face wore the straight-looking eyes that carried an assurance of fearless honesty. He had been away to Lexington to college and was going back. The keen intelligence of his face was marred by no note of meanness, and now, as he looked at the girl of the enemy, his shoulders came unconsciously erect with something of the pride that shows in men of wild blood when they feel in their veins the strain of the chieftains.

But Dawn, after her first blush, dropped her lids a little and tilted her chin, and without a word snubbed him with the air of a Haver looking down on a McBrier.

Milt met that gaze with a steady one of his own and banteringly said: "Dawn, 'pears like ye thought 'a' got tangled up with a rainbow."

Her voice was cool as she retorted: "I reckon that's better than gitting mixed up with some other things."

"I was jest a-thinkin', as I looked at ye," went on the boy gravely, "thet hit's better then gittin' mixed up with anything else."

Dawn turned away and went stalking along the woodland path without a backward glance, and Milt followed at her heels, with Juanita, much amused, bringing up the rear. The easterner thought that these two young folks made a splendid pair, specimens of the best of the mountains, as yet unbroken by heavy harness. Then, as the younger girl passed under a swinging rope of wild grapevine, stooping low, a tendril caught in her hair:

Without a word Young Milt bent forward and was freeing it, tingling through his pulses as his fingers touched the heavy black mass, but as soon as she was loose the girl sprang away and wheeled, her eyes blazing. "How dast ye tech me?" she demanded, panting with wrath. "How dast ye?"

The boy laughed easily. "I dast do anything I wants," he told her.

For a moment they stood looking at each other, then the girl dropped her eyes, but the anger had died out of them, and Juanita saw that, despite her condescending air, she was not displeased.

Juanita, of course, knew nothing of Jeb's suspicions that had led him into the laurel, but even without that information, when Young Milt met them more often than could be attributed to chance on their walks and fell into the habit of strolling back with them, strong forebodings began to trouble her.

And one morning these forebodings were verified in crisis form, while the youthful McBrier lounged near the porch of Juanita's cabin talking with Dawn, another shadow fell across the sunlight: the shadow of Jeb McNash. He had come silently, and it was only as Young Milt, whose back had been turned, shifted his position, that the two boys recognized each other.

Juanita saw the start with which Jeb's figure stiffened and grew taut. She saw his hands clench themselves and his face turn white as chalk; saw his chest rise and fall under heavy breathing that hissed through clenched teeth, and her own heart pounded with wild anxiety.

But Milt McBrier's face showed nothing. His father's masklike calmness of feature had come down to him, and as he read the meaning of the other boy's attitude he merely nodded and said casually: "Howdy, Jeb."

Jeb did not answer. He could not answer. He was training and punishing every fiber cruelly simply in standing where he was and keeping his hands at his sides. For a time he remained stiff and white, breathing spasmodically; then, without a word, he turned and stalked away.

That moon a horseman brought a note across the ridge, and as Juanita Holland read it she felt that all her dreams were crumbling—that the soul of them was paralyzed.

It was a brief note, written in a copybook hand, and it ran:

"I'll have to ask you to send the McNash children over to my house. Jeb doesn't want them to be consorting with the McBriers, and I can't blame him. He is the head of his family."

Respectfully,
ANSE HAYER.

A stronger thing to Juanita Holland than the personal disappointment which had driven her to this work was now her eager, fiery interest in the undertaking itself. In these months she had disabused herself of many prejudices. There remained that lingering one against the man with whom she had not made friends.

The thing she had set out to do was a hundredfold more vital now than it had been when it stood for carrying out a dead grandfather's wish. She had been with these people in childhood and death, in sickness and want; she had seen summer go from its tender beginning to a vagabond end with its tattered banners of ripened corn; autumn had blazed and flared into high carnival.

As young Jeb had turned on his heel and stalked away, even before the coming of the note she knew what would happen, and what would happen not only in this instance, but in others like it. This would not be just losing Dawn, but as that was, it would be paralysis and death to the school; it would mean the leaving of every Haver boy and girl.

So she stood there, and afterward said quietly: "Milt, I guess you'd better go," and Milt had gone gravely and unquestioningly, but with that in his eye which did not argue brightly for restoration of peace between his house and that of his enemy.

When the two girls had gone to the cabin Dawn stood with a face that blanched as she began to realize what it all meant, then slowly she stiffened and her hands, too, clenched and her eyes kindled.

She came across to the chair into which the older girl had dropped listlessly and, falling to her knees, seized both Juanita's hands. She seized them tightly and fiercely, and her eyes were blazing and her voice broke from her lips in turgid vehemence.

"I hain't a-goin' ter leave ye!" cried Dawn. "I hain't a-goin' ter do it."

No word had been spoken of her leaving, but in this life they both knew that certain things bring certain results, and they were expecting a note from Bad Anse.

"I hope not, dear," said Juanita, but without conviction.

Then the mountain girl sprang up and became transformed. With her rigid figure and blazing eyes she seemed a torch burning with all the pent-up heritage of her past.

"I tells ye I ain't a-goin' ter leave ye!" she protested, and her utterance swelled to fiery determination. "Es fer Milt McBrier, I wouldn't spit on him. I hates him. I hates his murderin' breed. I hates 'em like—" she paused a moment, then finished tumultuously—"like all hell. I reckon I'm es good a Haver as Jeb. I hain't seen Jeb do nothin' yit."

Again she paused, panting with passionate rage, then swept on while Juanita looked at her sudden metamorphosis into a fury and shuddered.

"When I wasn't nothin' but a baby I foteched victuals ter my kintfolks a hidin' out from revenuers. I passed right through men that war a-tradin' 'em. I've done served my kintfolks afore, an' I'd do it ergin, but I reckon I hain't a-goin' ter let 'em take me away from ye."

Juanita could think of only one step to take, so she sent Jerry Everson for Brother Talbott, whom she had seen riding toward the shack hamlet in the valley.

"Thar hain't but one thing thet ye kin do," said Good Anse slowly when he and Juanita sat alone over the problem with the note of Haver command lying between them. "An' I hain't no ways sartin' that hit'll come ter nothin'. Ye've got ter go over ther an' have speech with Anse."

Juanita drew back with a start of distaste and repulsion. Yet she had known this all along.

"Ye see," she heard the missionary saying, "thar's jest one way Anse kin handle Jeb, an' nobody else kaint handle him at all. He thinks he's right. I reckon ef ye kin persuade Anse ter reason with him ye'll hev ter promise that Young Milt hain't a-goin' ter hang round hyar."

"I'd promise almost anything, I can't give them up—I can't—I can't!"

"Ef Anse didn't pecter little Dawn from the McBriers, Jeb would, ter a God's certainty, kill Young Milt," went on the preacher, and the girl nodded miserably.

"That's true," Gould answered, scratching his cheek under his black beard. "But you see, these fellows have got 'em. The new chaps would have to get 'em."

Does Everybody in Town Know—

That they need, or like, or want, what you are selling, and that they can afford it, at your prices?

The first ten years August Lange was in the flower selling business it was a constant struggle for him to make a modest living.

He knew flowers had a universal appeal, everybody wanted them, but few realized that they could be had for cents as well as dollars.

He began advertising them in the newspapers.

Now he is selling more flowers than any other florist in Chicago, has opened a branch store on State street, and employs seventy-five people.

Do all the people who like, or need, or want, what YOU have to sell, know that YOU sell it, and that you sell it at a price they can afford?

Are you constantly reminding them that they do like, or need, or want it, and that YOU are the man to buy it from.

August Lange is doing this by ADVERTISING IN THE NEWSPAPERS EVERY DAY IN THE YEAR.

Read the story elsewhere in this paper of what his advertising has accomplished in ten years.

MUNITIONS NOT MEN IS HOPE OF RUSSIA

JAPS WILL ATTEMPT TO SUPPLY
ALL RUSSIA WITH MUNI-TIONS OF WAR.

POLICY OF JAPANESE

National Policy of the Nipon Man Is Not to Set Troops Against Teuton Armies.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Tokio, Oct. 9.—Munitions, not men for Russia, is the great need of the Entente Allies today, say Japanese officials. The authorities have repeatedly denied reports that Russia has asked for troops, and that Japan will send troops. They are concentrating their efforts on the big problem of increasing the output of munitions for Russia.

The decision to enlarge government arsenals and even establish special factories pleases the military circles of Japan who see in this an opportunity not only to help Russia and hasten the end of the war but to create the means of increasing their own permanent production. It signifies military expansion without the necessity of a home campaign. Now that armaments are to be placed on a war footing the enlargements will remain for future use and thus the actual expansion of military equipment will not be a burden on the Japanese treasury. The notice of the public that this is a cause of great satisfaction to the military interests. It is understood that regular payments for the cost of the increased production will be made in London—in cash, thus augmenting the gold reserve held by the Japanese government.

Decision Endorsed.
Public opinion heartily endorses the government's decision to place all its resources at the disposal of the Allies—in the way of furnishing ammunition and general supplies. "There is no hesitancy," says the Japan Times, "in voicing the sentiments of the Japanese press. In making a prompt response to this demand for help, Japan is doing the voice of a friend in need. To the fullest capacity of our arsenals, factories and workshops, national or private, we will help our friends. Japan is proud to be shown where and how she can help."

Referring to the impracticability of sending troops the newspaper says: "We know full well that our friends, our allies, will not ask of us troops to come to take the bread from the mouths of our children, to leave the home unprotected, or make future recovery for them impossible. These are the only limits we set. The share we are prepared to take in the great struggle in which our friends are involved."

Great interest was attached here to references to the European war just made by Baron Takaaki Kato, ex-foreign minister, in a series of political addresses. Baron Kato directed the foreign policy of Japan during the first year of the war. After voicing Japan's desire to help the Allies with increased munitions the minister declared his belief that Japan's physical strength was insufficient to meet the needs of Russia—still Japan would do all she could.

Germans Shot Bolt.
Turning to the opinion of Baron Kato expressed the opinion that although Germany has been prepared to a degree of perfection beyond the expectations of the Allies, her real strength has been weakened and henceforth will begin to decay.

The statesman had something to say of France and Great Britain and undoubtedly voiced the prevailing sentiment among Japanese. "France," he declared, "has been a great power in the past, but her power is now at its lowest ebb. Britain has not yet raised her dormant power to action. Though many nations in England have rallied around the colors of the Entente, apparently do not take much interest in the life and death struggle in which the nation has been plunged." "Russia," he said, "has been plunged into a sharp conflict. The people in general have played the main and decisive part in two great wars. He believed that Russia would be one of exhaustion and expressed his unshakable conviction that the Allies would win.

He was impatient, he said, with the Japanese analysts who were obsessed with the absurd idea that Germany will become mistress of the world in the long run and eventually descend upon the Far East, seeking retaliation from Japan.

No Transport Ship.
Baron Kato talked very plainly as to why Japan would not send troops to the European theatres of war. "Such a thing," he said, "is an impossibility, to say nothing of the complete absence of a proper cause."

According to experts a large number of troops would be needed but we have no ships to transport large numbers. This difficulty might be overcome by a special agreement with the Allied powers for the supply of their own transports, but another and still more serious difficulty is the financing of such a step. The expenditure would amount to thousands of millions of yen per annum. How could such an enormous sum be raised? National honor prevents us from fighting at the expense of others. Assuming that Japan resorts to loans for the purpose, how could she raise or redeem such loans?

The general feeling in the various walks of Japanese life is that it would be unwise for Japan to risk its prestige in two victorious wars by a questionable military adventure in Europe.

AUSTRIAN MARINES RAID CHINESE MOVIE SHOW IN PEKING.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Peking, Oct. 9.—Numerous incidents of a disagreeable social nature are occurring in the foreign settlements in the Treaty Ports of China. The only foreign place of amusement in Peking, a moving picture show run by an East Indian British subject, was raided recently by some Austrian marines of the Austrian Legation Guard, because a British "animated cartoon" was uncomplimentary to the Emperors William and Francis Joseph.

But the most peculiar incident has occurred in Shanghai, where the German members of a club were requested to remain away from the clubhouse during the war. The overwhelming number of Britishers object to their presence. The Germans went to the club and took away many cups and other silver trophies, are now retaining them, threatening to melt them into swine (lump silver) unless their entrance fees and dues paid to the club are returned to them.

RUSSIANS DECLARE GERMAN PRISONERS ARE TREATED WELL

Claim Germans Show Better Care
Than the Russian Prisoners
Returning From Teuton Camps.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Petrograd, Oct. 9.—British Red Cross Commissioner Ernest Hart, in a report to Prince Oldenburg, patron of all sanitary work in Russia, contrasts the good appearance and general healthfulness of German prisoners of war with the distressful condition of Russian war prisoners returning from Germany, at the time of their exchange at Torneo on the Swedish frontier. Commissioner Hart visited Torneo at the special request of Prince Oldenburg to witness the transfer, towards the end of August. His report follows:

"In the large new school house at Torneo I found 247 invalid or disabled men, Austrian and German, most excellently accommodated, the wards being large, airy and scrupulously clean, the beds very comfortable, with ample room between each, and the food consisting of nourishing soup with meat, another dish of meat and wholesome bread in good quantity. I spoke to several prisoners, who were grateful for the treatment they had received both on the journey from Petrograd and at the hospital. They were cleanly and physically fit, as good condition as the injuries they had received in battle permitted. That is to say they were well nourished. Where their own clothing was fresh and clean, including a warm overcoat, a cap, and often shoes."

"I saw these men sent away across the border the same evening, and the arrangements for removing them by wagons, motor cars and boats, furnished with necessary conveniences and protected by the weather left nothing to be desired on the score of humanity. I also crossed into Haparanda and inspected the arrangements of the Swedish Red Cross under Dr. Nauckhoff, who spoke very highly of the completeness and humanity of the treatment of the invalid prisoners of war by the Swedish authorities. It was very clear that the Swedish authorities did not hold the same favorable opinion of the treatment of Russian prisoners by the Germans, and I was informed that Haparanda that they were sent out of Germany in a painfully dirty and neglected condition, often half naked and half starved."

"I had the opportunity of verifying these reports the next morning, when about 250 Russian prisoners arrived from Germany. Several of the men were wearing the same cotton clothing, and some of them had been without shoes and socks, and they had traveled in this condition from Koenigsberg in Germany through Sweden and into Haparanda, leaving at night. Several of the men were like scare-crows so ragged and filthy was their condition, and one was clothed in the uniform of a dead French prisoner of war."

"The men were thin and emaciated, they had been half starved during the imprisonment. They produced samples of the bread that was given them, it being extremely hard and mouldy and mixed with potatoes and even particles of straw. They said little or no meat was given them in the thin soup served out to them daily. In addition they had been subjected to severe punishment for alleged breaches of discipline despite their maimed and disabled condition, the punishment including their being compelled to stand on barrels for hours at a time, or being tied to posts with their arms above their heads. They were also frequently struck by their German guards with the butts of their rifles or the flat of their swords."

"One of the worst features of the condition of the returned Russian prisoners was the number of cases of tuberculosis. These numbered some sixty out of the 250 men returned, and I was told that the usual number was about 20 per cent. The cases of tuberculosis among German and Austrian prisoners, on the other hand, were only 5 to 10 per cent of the total of 1,350 already exchanged. Some of the returned Russian prisoners had lost their feet while in prison in Germany, from frost bites due to exposure. There have been such cases among the German and Austrian prisoners in Russia, and I have had the opportunity of seeing and conversing with these prisoners in Moscow and other parts of Russia, which I have visited during my journey in Poland, Galicia, Mid-Russia and the Caucasus."

TURKEY IS SILENT ON THEIR ACTIONS TOWARD ARMENIANS

Germany is Placed in a Dilemma
Over Reports of Slaughter of Christians.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Constantinople, Oct. 9.—By virtue of a total depression of all news on the subject of the Turkish government's attitude towards the Armenians, nothing definite is obtainable in Constantinople of the state of this people out in the provinces, but it is known that severe measures planned against the Armenians in the Ottoman empire were not carried out owing to objections of the German government.

Concerning the Armenian affair, three separate notes were presented to the Ottoman government by the German ambassador at Berlin, Prince Hohenlohe-Langenburg. If the Associated Press is rightly informed, these notes had no far-reaching effect, because under pressure of the German government, Turkey has been obliged to act rather gently. Turkey is still the ally of Germany, and the Armenians seem to have alienated the good will of the German government by making considerable extent by having made open cause with the entente powers. Many of them have joined the Russian army, and Van and Zeitoun, and Dort Jul, the Turkish authorities. The three notes referred to were but official incidents in weeks of endeavor to persuade the Turkish government to take a more reasonable and humane view of the Armenian affair. One of the notes drew attention to the great injustice of making all Armenians suffer for the acts of a few.

Turks Are Silent.
The Turkish government, however, seems to have remained adamant. As already stated, it has been impossible to secure accurate information in the premises. Turkish officials have either refused to discuss the situation, or have placed all blame on the Armenians; these latter, on the other hand, have refused to talk for fear of being accused of having assigned all responsibility to the Turks. A mass of irreconcilable statements has been the result, ranging from the absurd claim that the Armenians were being well treated, to the assertions of Armenians that 50,000 Armenians had been slaughtered.

That the Turks have been in many instances been guilty of needless and permitted barbarous acts of violence, including murder and rape, seems well established. On the other hand, the Armenians in the Van country, accused of similar excesses against the Turkish officials, have been repaid such acts with brutal interest, it is said, in well informed Constantinople circles.

Separate State.
It cannot be said that the acts of the Turkish government in this connection have found the approbation of the advance Turkish circles in the capital, who, for the present, favor a policy of conciliation, and some of whom even go so far as to advocate the establishment of a separate Armenian state under the sovereignty of the Ottoman imperial government. Meanwhile the tendency of the Ottoman government, to divide the Armenians into two camps, Armenians are being treated as a too obviously artificial and character, would have but one result, namely that it is both ashamed and that the truth be known. The many attempts made by the Associated Press correspondents to throw some light on the Armenian situation resulted in failure, because the Turkish officials would not talk and the censors would not permit the free passage of dispatches on the subject.

Not Blameless.
Nevertheless it must be said that the Armenians are not blameless. Divested of all factors relative to national ambitions of the Armenians, their conduct towards the Turks and the Ottoman government has invited constantly measures of repression. The rising of Zeitoun, Dort Jul and Van, and wholesale desertions of Armenian soldiers to the Allies on the Turkish peninsula, have turned the Turkish heart in matters of vengeance upon guilty and innocent alike.

Constantinople has for weeks had its daily crop of Armenian refugees, and of the most interesting of them is that given the Sheikh-ul-Islam had protested against the excesses from which the Armenians have suffered. There is a possibility that this is because the Sheikh-ul-Islam is a man of moderation and very progressive tendencies.

It is asserted in Constantinople that the German government has for some time, even at the beginning of the war, taken a special interest in the Armenians. The Germans feared from the very start of the war between Turkey and the Entente that the Armenians would make an attempt to establish by force their independence.

Germany to Act?
Prominent Armenians were informed that Germany would continue, and even increase, its benevolent attitude in the face of a reasonable attitude being taken by the war. For a time the influence of the news was had been entrusted with the dissemination of this promise had the desired result. But last January and February more especially in March and April, when the Allies had been to attack the Dardanelles in real earnest, the service of these intermediaries ceased to be of value. Exaggerated reports of "Entente victories" inflamed the imagination of the Armenians, and in many parts they rose in revolt.

What has happened since then is still an unwritten chapter. No newspaper men are allowed to visit the affected districts and reports from these are altogether unreliable. The reticence of the Turkish government cannot be looked upon as a good sign, however, especially when viewed in the light of what the German government has been obliged to do.

Sells Flowers Through Newspaper Advertising

Ten Years Ago August Lange Employed Three People; Now Uses

Advertisements Every Day in the Year.

(By Andrew L. Demling.)

The individual who, in innocence, recklessness or bravado, breaks into newspaper work in the guise of inter-view goes through very much the same training as the new man to the pick and shovel, the digger of ditches gets blisters on his unaccustomed hands, but can only grin and bear it until the callouses come. The digger for information also grins and bears it until his disposition becomes calloused to the kinks in human nature.

For the interviewer-in-general, each day brings its types, from the man who knows nothing about the subject, wouldn't-tell-if-he-did, and the man who tells you everything you want to know, and then adds that of course that isn't for publication, to the man who greets you with a smile of affable understanding, and turns your interview into an interesting chat.

And that was how luck favored us this morning, when we greeted Rudolph J. Mohr, manager of Chicago's largest florist shop.

"We're pretty rushed today, but we're always glad to welcome the 'newsies,' whatever their errand," he said, as he stepped about, and turned to lead the way out of the busy front of the shop. "We could scarcely feel any other way toward you, and you have made our success, could we?"

"Have the newspapers done that?" we asked. "But if you want me to tell you how, I'd better begin at the beginning."

Former Errand Boy Becomes Proprietor.

"While August Lange is of foreign birth, his family came to the United States when he was a youngster, and he attended our American schools. But when he was fifteen, he announced that he was going to secure his further education in the business world."

So he secured work with what was at that time the oldest florist and is now one of the oldest, florist establishments in Chicago.

He started as errand boy and continued working for him in capacities of growing importance. By the time, twenty years ago, he established his own business.

Early Business Years Bring Struggles.
"The first years of the flower business was one of many struggles," said Lange was no exception in his experience. It was principally a question of getting by, making a modestly comfortable living. Some after scheme plan after plan proved fruitless of the expected success bringing results.

All the time he was noticing that the big successes in the flower business were newspaper advertisers.

Finally he began to ask himself if or how he could advertise flowers, and after a long time he decided to try it. He began to advertise special flowers for Sunday, at special prices, or something like that.

"So that was the origin of his dollar boxes. He advertised that he would deliver a dollar box for a dollar on Saturdays and a dollar box for a dollar on Sundays in this town before, and that they would be of first quality and fresh."

That also was the beginning of the big growth of the business.

Working Force Grows From 3 to 75.
"When he established the business, his working force consisted of two clerks and a man to see to things in his absence. But now he has grown from forty in the off seasons to 150 during the holidays, and an average of 75 in ordinary times, and thousands of people are still buying our Saturday dollar boxes."

"This eight or ten years of newspaper advertising has brought us to the point where we sell more flowers per year than any other establishment in Chicago."

Advertise Every Day in the Year.
"And has your advertising kept pace with your growth?" we asked. "We started with a few weekly advertisements," he returned. "Now we advertise every day in the year, regardless of season, weather, or general conditions."

"Of course, the size of our space varies, but our usual display runs 100 lines, two columns. Sometimes we use less, and in special seasons or occasions we use a great deal more. Frequently entire pages. For example, on 2 is our standby for general use. Our appropriation runs perhaps a little over 5 per cent. of our yearly business."

New Store Prospers in Poor Year.
"Are people buying as many flowers this year as ordinarily?" we asked. "Almost," he answered. "In fact, we established our first branch shop this year, here in the loop, and about all indications, it will mark the beginning of a chain of loop stores."

"Of course, we have had to do a little more advertising than usual this year, like everyone else. But it has maintained our volume of business very close to the standard of our best years, and has, as I say, established our new State street store as a distinct success."

Flowers Permit of Original Advertising.

"And are there no seasons when flowers cannot be advertised profitably?" "Every season has its individual flowers, that best interpret it, and that are in demand," he returned. "And aside from the growing number of flower days, they always permit and suggest individual and original advertising ideas."

"No special flower, recently there being no special flower, signifies me to advertise, we announced that we would show the greatest number of dahlias that had ever been shown in a Chicago shop."

"We ran the advertisement Saturday morning, and before noon the place was packed and we were selling dahlias with both hands."

Advertising Encourages Universal.

"Mr. Lange was the pioneer flower advertiser in Chicago. Before that it was the same in this field as in any other. They didn't realize the scope it was possible to secure in flower selling, because their universal appeal had not been developed."

People have always loved flowers, but formerly they were regarded as luxuries. It was newspaper advertising that taught people that flowers may be bought for cents as well as dollars.

As has taught the public in general that they can afford flowers, and constant advertising reminds people that they do love them and want them. "The commercial side of the flower business is a rapid developing one. I am one of three graduates of the Missouri Botanical Garden in the past few years to forsake the teaching and growing end of the work for the commercial, and I believe more of them are going to do it, as its possibilities are appreciated."

"Let us hope they start out with the proper appreciation of newspaper advertising in their business," we suggested, as he walked with us to the door. "Well," he said, "I think everybody is waking up to that, whatever business they are in, don't you?"

centage of the Malady.—Should Destroy This Weed.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 9.—Wisconsin's hay-fever victims have attracted the attention of the state board of health and in the quarterly health bulletin issued today general suggestions are made as to how the suffering may be mitigated. "Rag-weed" is shouldered with the responsibility for much of the suffering and the golden rod which has heretofore been accused as causing 50 per cent of the cases is now placed in the 15 per cent class. The pollen of the latter flower is heavy and tenacious and is not wind-blown.

"The pollen of the rag-weed, however, is easily detached in clouds and is distributed by the wind over a large area," says the report. "The most active stage of the rag-weed is in the month of September and every effort should be made at this time to destroy these noxious weeds. This will not only be a source of relief to hay-fever sufferers sensitive to these pollens, but will prevent the formation of the seed, which will produce the weeds in great abundance the following year."

Instead of the pollens of the rag-weed being used directly for fertilization through the agency of insects, as is the case with most plants, nature has created an immense amount of pollen so that it can be carried by the wind to the distant pistillate flowers. The pollen is so abundant that if it is struck during the active state, the pollen will come off so freely that it is called "smoking" by many farmers.

BULLETINS ON FARM PROBLEMS OUTLINED

Will Publish Twelve Agricultural Bulletins Through Co-operation
With Bankers' Association.

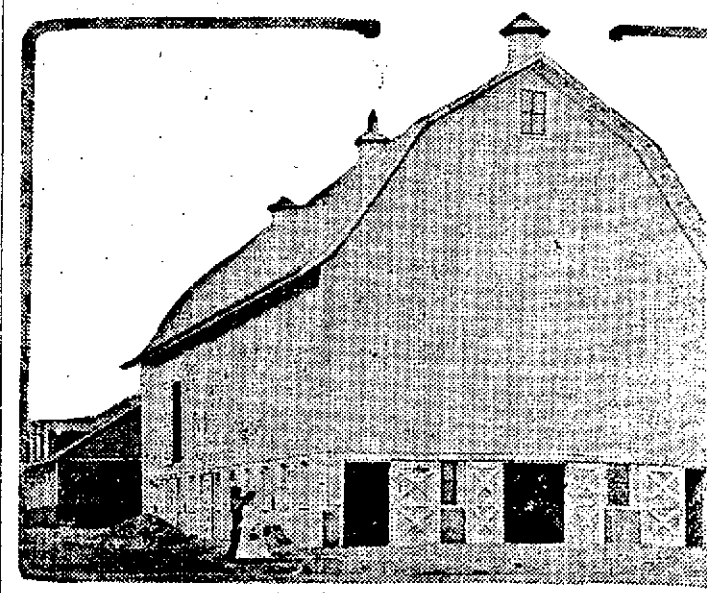

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Wis., Oct. 9.—Plans have been completed for the publication of the co-operation bulletins through the co-operation of the Wisconsin Bankers' association with the agricultural department of the University of Wisconsin. The subjects chosen for the 1916-17 series cover many of the activities of the farmer and his family. The list includes the following:

November—"Sell Products of High Quality." December—"Do Not Over-Capitalize the Farm." January—"How to Make the Small Farm Pay." February—"Why Carry Water? Let It Run Into the House." March—"How to Secure Seed Grain." April—"How to Beautify the Home Grounds." May—"Draft Horses Productively." June—"Save Clover Seed." July—"When Fly Time Comes." August—"When the Pastures are Short." September—"How to Borrow Money to Buy Cattle." and October—"How an Agricultural Representative Can Help the Farmers of the County."

The committee of the association having the supervision of the publication consists of W. A. Von Berg, Mosinee; J. R. Tomson, Richland Center; W. H. Dudley, West Salem; G. R. Maxwell, Princeton; J. McAlpine, Marinette; R. M. Smith, Still Lake and R. S. Orchard, Muskegon. More than 30,000 of these bulletins are sent out monthly by the bankers of the state.

POOR PAINT IS DEAR AT ANY PRICE

A Coat of Paint Helps to Give an Air of Prosperity.

"Even if it costs twice as much, a gallon of good lead paint will cover more surface, and last two or three times as long as any of the cheaper paint."

A successful Wisconsin painter was trying to convince his employer of the economy of buying only the superior grades.

He had the dealer set out gallon cans of two ready-mixed paints made by the same company. The gallon of the best was much heavier than a gallon of the inferior grade, showing the presence of more lead and of better quality. The price of the better paint was $1.85 a gallon, while the inferior grade was selling for 90 cents; but, according to the painter, the heavier paint would cover 350 square feet with a good coat, while it would require three gallons, or $2.70 worth, of the cheaper grade to cover a like space.

Comparing lead paints with mineral paints commonly used on barns, the painter stated that, while the first cost of lead paints was somewhat more, the results justified the expense, as lead paints are much more durable.

DELEGATION FROM TURKEY WILL ATTEND SESSIONS OF AMERICAN BOARD

A great attraction at the annual meeting of the American board, which comes this year at New Haven, Conn., Oct. 25-27, will be the place on the program of a group of men right from Turkey. They include President Christie of St. Paul's College, Tarsus, who has been 30 years in that country, has seen several massacres and who had to make a hurried exit this summer after trying to help to influence Constantinople in favor of the Armenians; Father of St. Sivas, who came home a month ago, after having seen the Armenians and their mission pupils and constituency marched off toward the deserts; Goodsell, of the Marston Theological school, home on furlough; McKnight, of Bardazag, who was his English birth and connection; Maynard, of Bitlis, where the Turks made their stand after the Russians drove them out of Van, and from Van itself some representatives of the little party which fled across the plain and over the mountains to Tiflis, when the Turks came back again. This is due in America early in the month.

These men have a wide constituency in America. Dr. Christie being a graduate of Beloit and Andover; Mr. Goodsell, of the University of California; Mr. Partridge, an Oberlin man, and the Van bunch representing Williams College, Kansas Medical and Wesleyan University.

"There's to be a fine showing from China, also, and especially from the part of the China mission where martyrdom at the hands of the Boxers is only fifteen years behind it, but whose progress now is so phenomenal that even skeptics believe in miracles. Africa, the Philippines, India, Micronesia—there's not room to hint at the stories to be told from these places. But for interest and importance this 106th annual meeting is likely to be a record breaker."

Hanging Hard Wood Shelves.
Instead of the usual wooden pegs for assembling the parts of hard wood shelves, a substitute which will serve the purpose equally as well consists of wire nails driven into one board, the heads filed off, and these protruding ends plugged into holes in the other board.—World's Advance.

Her Choice.
"The man who can drive with one hand is the man for me," answered Edna gayly. "You're easily satisfied," replied her friend Ruth. "For my part, I prefer the man who asks me to drive."

Press Bureau is Hard at Work—Democrats Aid in Spreading Tales About the Philipp Administration.

N. B.—This is one of a series of political articles written exclusively for the Gazette.

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 8.—Business called me into Milwaukee, the first part of the week and I was in Minneapolis on Tuesday when the question of license or no license was voted on. Of course this is not Wisconsin political matters but I found a lot of state wide politicians in the city on election day watching the results most anxiously and learned a good bit of the sentiment of these men as to Wisconsin. Some of it was what I believed to be correct and some of it was so biased that you could hardly recognize the germs of truth in the stories told.

My business to discuss politics while engaged in following the Willow the Wisp that brings me my bread and butter so I absorbed a lot of interesting information. I was more into the city and wondered where it all came from. It was not until I got to La Crosse on Wednesday that I found that the La Follette press bureau was busy well. Say, Husting certainly means to pay back his obligation to Bob during the coming campaign. It is a reasonable thing. His agents are as earnest in their endeavors to support La Follette and condemn the Philipp administration as any meddling set of politicians could be.

I took in Eau Claire also and found the same doctrine being preached. Then came Superior and while it is not as strong as the other cities, it has been, owing to the Seamus bill affecting lake traffic, it is strong enough to convince me that anyone who says the La Follette press bureau has lost any of its cunning is sadly mistaken.

Why, say, I heard more stories made out of whole cloth. More genuine and unadulterated lies told in three days than I thought I could hear in a week. I could trade off influence for position and all such rot. Those who know Emanuel Philipp as I do, know he does not play politics in his appointments but chooses the man he thinks is fitted for the job.

While I may not approve personally of every appointment that has been made by the governor, I am not to be contented, but I do say that he has not made a single one that was not made on the merits of the person named and that his corps of assistants are the best that could be found in the state regardless of any political affiliation. Philipp has run the state thus far on the basis that he was selecting men to run the state's business just as he would select the man to run his own private business and that the best was none too cheap.

Well, I got back to Milwaukee and found it popping. Of course, I must admit that Milwaukee always thinks it has the state and that the Milwaukee goes so will the state. It is an absurd idea but it has been encouraged in the past by former administration and consequently become something more than a fiction in the minds of many. "Fresido" politicians who talk a heap and does little when time for action comes. This kind of politician amuses me. I have seen too many of them. They can be bought or sold for a "half penny" in good genuine money when it comes right down to it and the Governor need not fear this species of politician so long as he is in the state.

Ed Wheelock was here when I reached the Cream City. I had seen mention of the fact he was in the state in the interests of Senator Sherman of Illinois for the presidential nomination but I did not know how far this Sherman boom had gone. I was glad to learn first hand what was doing. Wheelock began his work in Wisconsin on the old Green Bay Advocate in 1868. He worked there and then went south to Memphis, Tennessee to feed an old time printing press at nine dollars a week just because the Advocate would not pay him five dollars instead of four for his services. Charles Robinson ran the Advocate in these days with his brother and he was a figure in state politics.

Well, Wheelock afterwards worked in Milwaukee on the old Journal that was in a building that stood where the Babst building does now. Then he tried saw mill life for seven years and afterwards bought a paper of his own. He later drifted into other communities and when Pfister secured control of the Sentinel he handled the editorial columns. I would have been well for the Sentinel if they had continued him until now, but three years ago Wheelock sort of semi-retired from active work and moved to Chicago and has offices in the Ashland block in that city.

Well, Wheelock was in Wisconsin sort of scouting out the sentiment of the republicans as to presidential possibilities. He is a Sam Miller man and if half he says can be believed. Sherman will have the solid Illinois and Missouri delegations and he would like the conservative republicans of Wisconsin to get behind him as well as this assuring a middle west delegation that would count for something and be recognized if Sherman could not get enough votes to turn to some other candidate. Well, I have known Wheelock for years. I knew him years ago when he ran a paper in the "woods" and later when he handled the editorial columns on the Sentinel. I was interested to see what he had to say and what he had to offer. I found him easily and while he did not head off and probably told him lots of things, I was not a bit got but little in return except that all Illinois was united upon Sherman and that he had the backing of every republican and could be nominated for president if he secured enough votes but could he? That was what I wanted to know.

Then Wheelock told me that Sherman would be the choice of the middle west—the old Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota and he hoped Wisconsin, that four hundred and fifty votes at the next national convention would nominate him and he would have a good-sized slice of that number when the convention opened. He wanted Wisconsin republicans to get in line so they could have their plate up for the second helping and extra gravy if Sherman was nominated and elected, and he did not see any good in asking for a third helping. It was logical enough. Perhaps Sherman is the finest man in the world. Perhaps the Wisconsin delegates could do no better than tie up to the Illinois crowd and secure recognition, but as I pointed out to Wheelock, the first thing was to secure the republican delegation, to clinch that the republicans not the ultra progressives named the delegates to the next national republican convention. Upon this hinged the whole situation. Right here I want to say that La Follette is going to name himself as Wisconsin's chosen son for the presidential delegates and thus avoid a conflict with Philipp at this epoch in his career. He knows he could not command any other delegation than Wisconsin, unless it be the few votes in North Dakota, but he dare not face an issue with Philipp by seeking to head the Wisconsin delegation to the national republican convention against the ticket headed by Philipp. Should he lose this issue he is cooked for the senatorial campaign and he knows it. Furthermore, he is not going to stump the state. He is delaying his starting on his much-hounded tour until Wilson makes that call for the special session of the United States senate he has intimated he intends to do. Perhaps Wilson is too busy just now making love and arranging for his coming marriage to call this session, but down deep in his heart La Follette wishes he would do so as his excuse for not taking the platform against Philipp and his administration would be valid. Now mark my words what I tell you. La Follette will be a candidate for the Wisconsin delegation's selection at presidential candidate. If he can accept Sanborn's overtures of peace he will have him as one of his delegates, but Sanborn backed some years ago and La Follette does not trust him overy Government will not be a candidate for this delegation. In fact, McGovern stands a mighty poor chance of being elected. He is stirring up trouble during the next year politically, without obtaining any results for himself or his followers. As to returning to this country, it is probable that I mean to look into it deeper and perhaps have something to say on it later on. Meanwhile "Pax Vobiscum."

Whitewater News

Whitewater, Oct. 9.—Friday was all canvassers day for the M. E. church and about fifty canvassers were out securing pledges for financial aid for the year's work for the church. The church was dedicated yesterday and has been pledged in many ways there being over again as much as last year. A free supper was given at the church last evening to all people in the city and vicinity who count themselves church home and over two hundred were served.

Mrs. H. E. Knox of Milwaukee is here visiting at the home of Mrs. J. C. Kachel.

Mrs. James Smith, Miss Clara Smith, Mrs. Lillie Goodhue and the Misses Lorence and Winifred Taft motored to Janesville this morning and stayed at the Hotel.

Word was received from Los Angeles, California, yesterday, of the death of Mrs. Robert Link of that city. The deceased was formerly Miss Lizzie McClure and spent her younger life here, having graduated from both the high and normal schools. She leaves several brothers and sisters and a husband and one son.

The Whitewater Bridge company is to rebuild the bridge and approach at the Red Mill, their bid being $1600. The contract calls for a span of 16 feet but the bridge and approach must be placed on piles which makes it expensive. It is necessary under the law to hold an election to vote an appropriation for these repairs, if the bridge is to be replaced.

Water will have to build the bridge and pay for it themselves, while if the citizens vote for it the state will pay one-third and the county one-third. Consequently as the law on the subject provides that highways must be repaired the vote by the town people is just a formality.
